THE INAUGURAL.

The New President to His Fellow-Citizens.

WASHINGTON, March 5th.—Following is the Inaugural Address of President

Hayes:

Fellow Citizens: We have assembled to repeat the public ceremonial begun by Washington, observed by all predecessors, and now a time honored custom which marks the commencement of a new term of the Presidential office. Called to the duties of this great trust, I proceed, in compliance with usage, to announce some of the leading principles on the subjects that now chiefly engage the public attention by which it is my desire to be guided in the discharge of these duties. I shall not undertake to lay down irrevocably the principles of the future of the administration, but rather to speak of the motives which should animate us, and to suggest certain important principles to be attained in the path of our institutions and essential to the welfare of our country. At the outset of the discussion which preceded the recent Presidential election, I trusting that I should fully make known my sentiments in regard to several of the important questions which then appeared to me in the consideration of the country. Following the example, and in part adopting the language of one of my predecessors, I wish now, when every motive of misrepresentation has passed away, to repeat what was said before the election, trusting that my countrymen will candily weigh and understand it; that they will not feel assured that the sentiments declared in accepting the nomination for the Presidency will be the standard of my administration, but before me, charged as I know I am with the grave and difficult task of carrying them out. In the practical administration of the Government, so far as depends, under the constitution and laws, on the Chief Executive of the Nation, the permanent pacification of the country upon such principles and by such measures as will secure the complete protection of its citizens in the full enjoyment of all their constitutional rights, is now the one subject in our public affairs which all thoughtful and patriotic citizens regard as of supreme importance. Many of the cautious effects of a civil war, and revolution which has passed over the Southern States still remain.

THE STATE OF THE SOUTH.

The immeasurable benefits which will surely follow reconstruction, the hearty and generous acceptance of the legitimate results of the revolution have not yet been realized. Difficult and delicate as the task now set us at the threshold of this subject. The people of those States are still improved, and the inestimable blessings of peace, honesty and peace, which our Government is not fully enjoying.

Whatever difference of opinion may exist as to the cause of this condition of things, and as to the best means of progress of events, the time has come when such a government is the imperative necessity required by all the various and conflicting interests of those States. But it must not be forgotten that only a local government which recognizes and maintains inviolable the rights of the citizen as a citizen
